It is hard to realize, says a writer in the Methodist Magazine, when we see Chamonix crowded with summer visitors, how short a time has really elapsed since it was a remote mountain village, consisting of the few huts clustered around the priory and scarcely ever receiving a visitor from the outer world, but in the comparative desertion of winter such a state of things is easier to conceive. The men who dared to venture on the glaciers 100 years ago in search of crystals or chamois brought back strange stories of wild witch dances in those terrible wildernesses of dragons and monsters. A Geneva professor, Jacob Scheuchzer by name, printed in all seriousness an account of the dragons of Mount Blane. THE QUEEN'S CHILDHOOD.

Little Victoria Loved Dolls Dearly, and Made Dolls' Dresses.

The childhood of Victoria was much more simple and unrestricted than would have been the case had it been known that she would become the Queen of England. She was born in Kensington Palace, May 24, 1819, and lived there the greater part of the time until the death of William IV. made her Queen. She was a happy little child, and her amusements were much the same as those of other English girls.

No little girl ever loved dolls more dearly than did Victoria. When she became old enough to manage needle, thread and thimble she made with her own fingers dresses, coats and hats for her children, as she called them. She had and houses and doll furniture. Victoria played with the dolls long after the period that the average child devotes to such pleasure. Victoria was deprived of her father's Spoke Five Languages and Was a Great Lover of Children. The most interesting and intimate glimpse into the private affairs of the Queen and into her recent home life is given in a volume entitled "Private Life of the Queen by a Member of the Royal Household," and from which the following information was gleaned: Victoria was always a good talker, reading widely and speaking five languages fluently. She knew about all the poets and artists of note, and her interest in the affairs of the world never decreased on account of age. As she grew older the Queen displayed more marked interest in religious affairs. She attended to all her religious duties. The Queen always displayed a great love for children. She had a standing order for the picture of every lineal descendant newly born to be forward-

In her declining years she cultivated a habit for games at cards. She was always fond of such games, however. On her long travels. Patience was her favorite game. Her Majesty had many little fads, peculiar to her, intensified with age. She had a strong dislike to new faces around her.

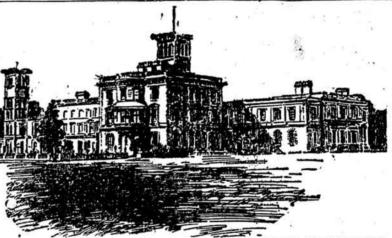

The Queen had the most utter ab-horrence for cats. Until soft electric lights came into use 'she always insisted upon wax candles. The Queen, while disliking cats, had the greatest love for dogs and horses.

The annual income of the Queen amounted to $1,925,000 a year, all told. She received the same allowance that was given to George IV. and William IV., but while they left no sum unappropriated at the end of the year Victoria saved regularly over $40.000. Her Majesty, in her own name, owned 37.372 acres of land, which yielded her a yearly income of more than $100,000. The Queen was most generous and frequently gave large sums of money in presents. All servants who had been faithful to the Queen were protected carefully by her. When traveling she took only a small retinue

ASKED THE PRINCE TO MARRY HER Following Royal Etiquette Victoria Herself Proposed to Suitor.

The Queen proposed marriage to the man who became her husband. Royal etiquette imposed the difficult task upon Victoria, as she was a Queen and the man of her choice. Prince Albert, was of inferior rank and station. No other romance ever figured in her life, though scores of mighty suitors sought her hand.

In her infancy she was consecrated to her first cousin, Francis Charles Augustine Albert Emanuel, second son of Ernest, Duke of Saxe-Goburg Saalfeld. Albert's father and Victoria's mother were brother and sister, children of the Duke of Coburg. She grew up with the idea so firmly imbedded in her thoughts that she was to be the wife of Prince Albert that it never occurred to her to alter the arrangement after she became Queen. Albert and Victoria met for the first time when they were both about seventeen years of age. She had been Queen a trifle more than two years when she proposed marriage to the Prince and he dutifully accepted. Duty and official procedure compelled her to personally announce her engagement to her Privy Council. So on November 23, 1830, the Privy Council was summoned specially to Buckingham Palace to receive the announcement. She read the declaration in a clear, sonorous, sweet-toned voice, but her hands trembled so excessively that the listeners wondered she was able to read the paper which she held.

Victoria did not believe in lengthy engagements. At noon on February 10, 1840, the Queen was wedded to the

GREAT FIRE IN MONTREAL

Fierce Flames Sweep the Business District of the City.

LOSS OF SEVERAL MILLIONS

The Fire One of the Most Disastrous in Flity Years - The Board of Trade Building, Which Cost $1,000,000, Left a Mass of Ruins-Many Firms Burned Out-Estimate of Losses.

Montreal, Que.-The business district of this city was visited by the most disastrous fire it has known for fifty years, and the loss is placed at $4,500. 000. The greatest loss is the Board of Trade Building, which was built in 1801, at a cost of $1,000,000, and is now a mass of ruins. It had more than two hundred and fifty tenants, and their loss will be about $550,000.

The fire started at ten minutes after ight o'clock in the clothing house of M. Saxe & Sous, in St. Peter street, and before the firemen could get to work the flames had spread to the Nelson Fireworks building.

Scores of explosions followed and in en minutes the eastern wall fell into the west side of the Board of Trade Building. The lire was thus carried through many windows and although the building was supposed to be fireproof, it was a seething mass of flame within an hour. To the south the fire spread to St. Paul street, and the firemen were beaten back inch by inch, until !: seemed that the eatire business portion of Montreal must go. A strong west wind blew for some time and this meant that the famous Notre Dame Church might go at any moment, but, thanks to a sudden change. St. Francis Navier street buildings were saved and the church was not touched. All along St. Paul street scores of small wholesale warehouses / were wiped out. At least four of the largest wholesale fur houses, which were carrying unusually large stocks, were destroyed. It is estimated that their loss will be a million dollars. Dealers say it will mean an increase of fifty per cent. in the price of furs.

The Montreal Board of Trade Building was occupied chiefly by well-known wholesale firms, and, while large stocks of goods were not carried in the building, sample rooms innum-erable were destroyed. The building was also occupied by upward of a score of firms in the wholesale grain trade, as well as half a dozen shipping firms, representing prominent lines. The railway offices included the Canadian Pacific, the Grand Trunk, the Canada Atlantic and the Delaware and Hudson. There were also in the building branches of all the telegraph lines. Many records of great value have been lost, and it is believed that cash running into the t pusands of dollars has been consumed. Forced by a north wind, the fire swept right to the river front. The burned space covers about three enire blocks.
